DEFEAT MEASURE CONCERNING
PRISON GOODS MANUFAC-TURED HERE

St. Paul, Jan. 16.—(UP)—The farm bloc of the Minnesota legislature will take no back seat this year for either the labor or big city blocs it was apparent today after a stormy session in which the rural contingent emerged victorious.

The farm element won out in its first battle in the senate Tuesday with the passage of a resolution to petition congress for the defeat of a measure which would bar prison goods manufactured at the Minnesota state penitentiary from interstate commerce.

The resolution, introduced by Sen. George H. Sullivan of St. Cloud, passed by a vote of 50 to 13. The vote was preceded by a heated two-hour debate between senators flaunting the banner of free labor and those interested in the agricultural angle of the resolution.

The opposition to the Sullivan resolution was led by Senators George Nordlin, St. Paul; Henry L. Morin, Duluth; George Lommen, Biwabik; and Charles Hausler, St. Paul, all representing strong labor districts. They declared the resolution would put the senate on record as favoring prison labor over free labor.

Advocates of the bill, led by Senators Sullivan and James A. Carley of Plainview, declared that passage of the prison measure, by congress would cripple the Minnesota penitentiary manufacturing shops and raise the price of twine and machinery to the farmer.

The resolution, Senator Sullivan explained, would be against passage of a bill that would take away the market in neighboring states of the output of the prison twine and machinery.

The sentiment toward the Sullivan resolution was of the widest difference between farm and labor devotees and brought about one of the most definite breaks no record in the farm-labor bloc.

St. Paul, Jan. 16.—A voluntary committee, headed by Representatives Oscar A. Swenson, Nicollet, and Andrew Finstuen, Kenyon, and 41 others, today introduced in the house of representatives a bill which would provide teeth for the gasoline tax amendment adopted in the Nov. 6 election.

The bill, if made law, will provide the working machinery for the tax amendment.

Other measures introduced in the legislature today include those which would seek a constitutional amendment to permit the imposition of taxes on incomes, privileges and occupations; change election dates in villages and boroughs.

In addition to the introduction of these bills the senate passed a resolution, passed by the house Tuesday night, which memorializes congress to oppose legislation which would curtail state rights and give to the interstate commerce commission jurisdiction over freight truck lines doing interstate business.

Meanwhile an interim committee in the house urged the passage of a small loan bill, in many respects similar to bills which have been defeated in the past.

Chief among the provisions of the gas tax bill are these:

Money derived from the diversion of one-third of the gasoline taxes from the state highway department shall be spent on county aid roads.

County commissioners shall designate such roads as they deem fit.

Not less than three-fourths of one per cent nor more than three per cent of the total shall be apportioned to any county in one year.

The apportionment shall be on the basis of mileage of roads and traffic needs in counties.

The highway commissioner shall make the apportionments.

Twenty-five per cent of the money given counties shall be devoted to the maintenance of county roads in various towns of the county, according to the ratio of mileage of such roads in each town bears to the total mileage of the county aid roads.

The remaining 75 per cent shall be spent at the dictate of the county board.

AIRPLANE CRASH COSTS THE LIVES OF TWO FLIERS

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 16.—(UP)—An airplane crash here last night cost the lives of two men, one a member of the army flying corps. Private Melvin Smith, enlisted from Asheville, N. C., and H. M. Marty O'Toole, of Los Angeles were killed when a monoplane owned by H. C. Sheridan of Minneapolis crashed on the Tucson municipal airport from an altitude of 500 feet.

Sheridan had intended to take off for Los Angeles today.

GENERAL BOOTH REFUSES TO LEAVE HIS POSITION

SAYS HE IS RESPONSIBLE FOR WELL-BEING OF GREAT ORGANIZATION

FEELS HE WILL BE LESS OF A MAN IF HE AGREED TO RETIRE

London, Jan. 16.—Gen. Bramwell Booth remains steadfast in his intention to resist efforts of the Salvation Army's high council to remove him as commander in chief.

The council's request for his resignation amounted virtually to a threat of expulsion, the general asserted, adding that he was compelled to refuse.

"Legally, the council has no power to propose, let alone to make, a change in the constitution of the Army," Gen. Booth's statement said.

"The council's request that I retire amounts to a threat of expulsion. Why should I retire under compulsion? My leadership at the moment may not be what it once was, but what assurance have I that I would be replaced by one who would seek first and foremost to maintain the principles of the Army?"

"I am responsible before God for the well-being of a great organization, which in less than 70 years has achieved a success that is unique in the history of the world. I feel that I should be less than a man, if I agree to retire. Therefore, I am compelled to refuse."

Gen. Booth's statement was the first public announcement he has made regarding the move led by his sister, Commander Evangeline Booth, to oust him and establish an elective high command.

The high council meeting at Sunbury-on-Thames yesterday, received the general's answer through his wife, Mrs. Bramwell Booth, but did not announce the answer in its customary official communiqué.

It issued, however, a report of the observations of the deputation of seven which called on Gen. Booth at his Southwold cottage to make the resignation request.

The report included a statement that the general was very feeble, and apparently was unable to turn in his bed without the greatest difficulty.

This was interpreted as forecasting that the council ultimately will decide the general is unfit to continue his leadership.

20 SURVIVORS OF CHINESE SHIP ARE PICKED UP

Hong Kong, Jan. 16.—(UP)—Twenty survivors of the Chinese steamer Hsinwah, which sank off Waglan island, have been picked up from the water by Chinese fishing boats at noon today. Four hundred Chinese, including passengers and crew, were aboard the vessel when it sank.

Hong Kong, Jan. 16.—(UP)—Additional rescues of survivors of the Chinese steamer Hsinwah, which sank off Waglan island, today brought the total saved to 28. The ship had 400 on board.

Chief Officer Jacobsen and five Chinese were picked up by fishing boats searching the water for survivors. Two others also were saved. Twenty persons were reported rescued earlier after lifeboats had overturned, spilling them into the water.

Jacobsen was picked up by a fishing boat after swimming for six hours. He was taken to a hospital after being brought here.

Washington, Jan. 16.—(UP)—President-elect Hoover today announced to the senatorial wet and dry leaders that he would appoint an impartial commission to begin a thorough-going investigation of prohibition soon after he takes office.

The president-elect outlined his plans to Sen. Jones, Washington, dry, and Edge, New Jersey, wet, authors of prohibition investigation resolutions, who announced after the conference they would drop the pending compromise resolution, and that Hoover would appoint the commission himself without such a resolution soon after his inauguration.

Both senators told Hoover they did not regard a congressional resolution as necessary, but that Hoover could appoint the commission and they would secure an appropriation to cover the cost in the extra session.

Senator Brookhart, republican, Iowa, who conferred with Hoover again today on farm relief, said he expected harmonious consideration of an agricultural measure at the extra session.

Hoover is devoting attention to the New York patronage controversy in which friends of William H. Hill, chairman of the New York Hoover-Curtis committee during the last campaign, are seeking a share for Hill in dispensing New York patronage with National Committeeman Charles D. Hilles.

The president-elect conferred with Hilles at breakfast today and last night discussed the situation with Under-Secretary of Treasury Ogden L. Mills of New York, who is among those seeking recognition for Hill.

Bucharest, Jan. 16.—(UP)—Fourteen persons were reported killed and several injured today when two work trains collided while enroute to relief of passengers on a derailed train near Turn-Severin.

BATTLE FOR CUSTODY OF NINE YEAR OLD DOROTHY RUTH

Watertown, Mass., Jan. 16.—(UP)—A legal battle over the custody of nine-year-old Dorothy Ruth, daughter of adopted daughter of "Babe" Ruth, was in prospect today as investigation of the death of the baseball idol's wife continued.

Rumors that the child, now at the Academy of the Assumption at Wellesley Hills, had been adopted by the Ruths, gained credence with the announcement by Mrs. Ruth's family that they would appeal to the courts for the custody of Dorothy and that they would claim the dead woman's estate.

HAVE SHOT OUT 2 LIVES
FOR FUN OF IT

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 16.—(UP)—A thrill hunter, who now sits expressionless and apparently unheeded of the thrill of fighting for life, entered the second day of his trial on a charge of murder today.

He is George Harsh, student, son of wealth, and seeker of thrills, who is alleged to have shot out two lives for the fun of it. The men who died when a good looking young gunman entered their stores in pursuit of robbery were Willard Smith, druggist, and H. S. Meeks, grocer.

A close woven chain of evidence designed to send the youthful Harsh to the electric chair was begun yesterday by the state. The day lacked its headlight—unless the cold demeanor of the accused in the face of his battle for life was a night light.

The state proceeded in an effort to show the robbery was for money and not a "thrill." Witnesses testified that Harsh at times pawned his watch and often ate sandwiches "on the cuff" at roadside restaurants.

The defense attorneys during cross examination, closely guarded their plans. Previously they had announced the plea of a "dual personality" as well as the theory Harsh is insane. They said Harsh was the unfortunate victim of a juvenile case of influenza which left him with one personality sober and another when drunk.

Harsh's companion, Richard Galloghly, who allegedly drove the automobile the two used in their night raids, is a prisoner in Fulton Tower, also charged with the two murders. His case is set for Jan. 30.

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 16.—(UP)—Peter Kudzinowski, who was convicted last week of the murder of Joseph Storelli, was sentenced to death in the electric chair on Feb. 24 by Judge Charles M. Egan today.

FOOD POISONING SICKENS 250 WOMEN STUDENTS

Winona, Minn., Jan. 16.—(UP)—Food poisoning today was held responsible for the illness of more than 250 women students of the college of St. Theresa, boarding school here.

Classes were resumed today after 11 nurses had left the college for their homes here. The trouble was traced to food served at breakfast Sunday, Dr. W. Lindsay, city health officer, announced. None of the victims was seriously ill, attending physicians said.

MATTER

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 16.—(UP)—The great southwest today faced one of the bitterest and most important legal battles in its history following the announcement that Arizona will ask the United States supreme court to prevent construction of the Boulder-Black Canyon Dam as provided in the approved Swing-Johnson bill.

Authorization of the suit was made yesterday by the Arizona Colorado River Commission, which instructed Mulford Winsor, secretary, to file suit at once. It was rumored that some of the most brilliant legal talent of the country would be enlisted to carry Arizona's cause to the high court.

Arizona contends that she is entitled to some part of the proceeds from sale of water from the dam since she would furnish the dam site and could be deprived of water now being diverted from the Colorado river below the proposed dam.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Having ratified the Kellogg world wide anti-war treaty, the senate advanced today to the second step of the administration's legislative program and gave attention to the delayed house bill proposing 15 new 10,000-ton naval cruisers and an aircraft carrier for national defense.

Over-night there was an entire transition in the congressional scene. The Borah-Kellogg-Coolidge phalanx which forced the senate to ratify the treaty by the overwhelming vote of 85 to 1 late yesterday afternoon, had been dissolved and Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee stepped out in leading opposition to the Coolidge cruiser program.

The three-cornered team had worked efficiently in the treaty fight, Borah drowning the treaty opposition by mastery in debate, Kellogg constantly on the telephone pleading and arguing with reluctant senate republicans and President Coolidge inviting the reluctant ones down to the White House when they became too vigorous in their objections to the pact.

The team worked so perfectly that not a single word of the pact was changed from the text as drawn by Kellogg and the 14 other nationals in Paris last August. As drawn and ratified it pledged the nations against recourse to war in international disputes and in favor of pacific means of settling all problems.

The possibility that any international rancor might develop because of the hot senate debate was believed abated by the report Borah presented from the foreign relations committee. It stated the opinion of the committee that the Monroe doctrine would not have any application under the treaty, that the pact would not embarrass nations from warring in self defense and that no nation was under obligation to enforce the treaty against any nation which violates it.

The treaty opponents were satisfied with this even though Borah presented an added paragraph explicitly stating that the report comprised only interpretations of the treaty by the committee and were not reservations to it.

As soon as the vote of ratification was taken, with Blaine of Wisconsin casting the lone dissenting vote, Chairman Hale of the naval affairs committee forced up his naval bill. The old lines were broken and new lines were formed. An intensive fight is in prospect.

The navy bill as now drawn provides that the new cruisers and the aircraft carrier shall be started at the rate of five a year within the next three years. Borah and others will seek to have the total number cut down to ten and perhaps five cruisers and Mr. Coolidge already has requested congress to eliminate the time clause.

The treaty and the naval bill were the two major problems to be disposed of by the congress before President-elect Hoover brings his new congress into power March 4, it having already been agreed farm relief and tariff revision will await the Hoover special session in the spring.

The Borah report which was merely filed with the senate and not adopted embodied the whole interpretation of the treaty which Borah expressed in his speech opening debate.

"Each nation is free at all times and regardless of the treaty provisions to defend itself and the necessity and extent of the same," it stated. "The United States regards the Monroe Doctrine as a part of its national security and defense."

President Coolidge and Kellogg were enthusiastic about the action of the senate. The White House as it is known Mr. Coolidge regards the pact as the greatest accomplishment of his administration.

I Always Strive to Serve You Promptly

I always make your connections as quickly as possible. But when you call a "busy" line, the only thing I can do is to have you hang up and call again after the other people are through talking.

Did you know that one call in every ten is made for a line that is already in use? A large number of these calls come from people who do not wait a reasonable length of time before calling a "busy" line a second or third time.

It will save your time if you wait a few minutes before placing another call for a "busy" line.

cide at Friedrichshoeh, near Newmunder. The baron was a famous sportsman and a former officer in the Wandsbeck hussars. His son, now dead, was a prominent surgeon who married a sister of the late empress.

St. Paul, Jan. 16.—(UP)—Permission to close its Deerwood exchange and increase rural line rates 25 cents monthly today was denied the Aitkin-Deerwood Telephone Co. by the state railroad and warehouse commission.

I Always Strive to Serve You Promptly

I always make your connections as quickly as possible. But when you call a "busy" line, the only thing I can do is to have you hang up and call again after the other people are through talking.

Did you know that one call in every ten is made for a line that is already in use? A large number of these calls come from people who do not wait a reasonable length of time before calling a "busy" line a second or third time.

It will save your time if you wait a few minutes before placing another call for a "busy" line.

NEW YORK FIRE CLAIMS SIX AS 200 HOMELESS

HARLEM TENEMENT BLAZE CAUSES DESTRUCTION THROUGH RESIDENTIAL BLOCK

ENTIRE FAMILY WIPED OUT; CHARRED BODIES FOUND IN RUINS

New York, Jan. 16.—(U.P.)—Six persons were burned to death and more than 200 lost their homes early today when fire started in the basement of a Harlem tenement house, swept up the wooden stairs and spread to adjoining buildings.

The bodies of three of the victims were identified as those of Justina Martinez and his two infant cousins, Olga and Manuel Esposito. The bodies of the other three were badly charred but they were believed to be Dionisio Esposito, his wife Hermenia and their young son Miguel.

Truck companies threw ladders up hastily and scores of residents climbed down the side of the blazing building. On the third floor, firemen found Mrs. Marie Martinez and her two children, Marie, 3, and Julia, nine months, overcome by smoke. They were carried to safety.

An emergency hospital was set up in a drugstore and scores were treated there for minor injuries. The homeless families were taken into nearby homes.

Firemen said the blaze started in a garment factory operated by Marcus Greenspan in the basement of the tenement.

FEDERAL PROHIBITION ENTERS 10TH YEAR OF ENFORCEMENT

Washington, Jan. 16.—(U.P.)—Federal prohibition entered its tenth year today with the problem of its enforcement engaging the attention of President-Elect Hoover as one of the most complex problems before him.

Coinciding with the ninth birthday of federal prohibition, Mr. Hoover announced to senatorial dry and wet leaders that he would appoint an impartial commission of experts to begin a thorough survey of prohibition enforcement conditions soon after he takes office.

He informed Senators Edge, wet, New Jersey, and Jones, dry, Washington, his plan is for investigation not only into enforcement of prohibition and the "grave abuses" which he has recognized in enforcement, but also for an inquiry into the fundamentals of the Volstead act itself.

The investigation also will go into the relations, if any, of disrespect for the prohibition law with the general attitude toward law enforcement in the country.

The plants treat in addition to cross ties, bridge timber, piling, telegraph poles, paving blocks, anchor logs for telegraph lines and other miscellaneous material. Treatment of these products is an economic measure.

THE LEGISLATURE FARM BLOC IS IN EVIDENCE

called up by Sen. John A. Houghton, Crookston, who urged its immediate adoption, under suspended rules. Sen. Houghton declared that motor freight truck lines were the northwest's defense against the Fargo rate case decision which he branded as "stifling to this part of the country."

Sen. James M. Millet, Hastings, introduced the bill asking the constitutional amendment allowing the legislature to impose taxes on incomes, privileges and occupation. The taxes would be graduated and progressive.

Under the terms of a bill introduced by Sen. Victor Christgau, of Austin, and others, the first Tuesday after the first Monday of every December would be election day in villages and boroughs instead of the present system of election in the spring. The bill provides that until Jan. 1, 1930, present officers would not be affected but newly-elected officers of next December would take over their duties on that date.

The small loan bill drafted by the house interim committee, which included Mrs. Mabeth Hurd Paige, of Minneapolis, and R. J. Quinlivan, St. Cloud, does not differ materially from the one defeated during the 1927 session.

Its most important provisions are: Persons, partnerships or corporations seeking to make loans of $300 or less on personal security, chattel mortgages or assignment of wages, shall be licensed by the state commissioner of banks to post a bond of $1,000 and pay an annual license fee of $100.

Interest not to exceed 3½ per cent a month, without further charge for inspection, service or commission, not to be paid in advance or compounded.

Commissioner of banks to examine licensed lenders at will not less than once a year.

Commissioner to prescribe system of bookkeeping for lenders and to make such rules and regulations as may be deemed necessary for proper conduct of business.

Penalty for violation, on conviction, of a fine of not more than $500, imprisonment for not more than six months, or both.

BLIND LAKE

Those going to Pine River the latter part of last week were Julius Erickson, Ernest Peterson, James Elbes, Charles Hardy, Ben Mayer, J. Pratt, Dan Dauber, Nils Anderson and Fred McKeebe and son.

L. O. Fick and brother Emery returned home Friday morning. They received word that their mother had pneumonia, but was out of danger when they arrived. They drove one day and all one night from Iowa, and had a bad storm to contend with.

Mr. Johnson and son moved to their timber camp last week east of L. O. Ficks. One son, Arvid, does the hauling of logs with the truck.

Mr. and Mrs. Wickham accompanied by Mrs. John Dauber, made a trip to Brainerd last week on Wednesday where Mrs. Dauber consulted Dr. Thabes.

John Dauber and Fred McKeebe put up their summer's supply of ice last week. Dan Dauber and Harry McKeebe cut the ice which was 15 inches in thickness.

Dan Dauber called at the Mark Westfall home Sunday evening.

Out school started this week and all scholars were in attendance but one. This is a very good report after all had been ill with measles and colds.

The Blind Lake Farmers club expect to hold their meeting this Friday night at which time new officers for the coming year will be elected.

Toledo, O., Jan. 16.—(U.P.)—Ted Hay, 30, pilot for Transcontinental Air Transport company, was killed here today when his plane crashed as he was attempting to land.

Witnesses said one of the wings of Hay's ship collapsed as the aviator soared 75 feet above the field for his landing. The low altitude apparently prevented him from righting the plane.

John Hancock's signature

You have heard of him, of course. Everyone has. His signature is the first affixed, the most boldly executed, on the Declaration of Independence.

When that great document was drawn up and ready to sign, there was a pause. It was a moment of grave importance to all present. By placing their signatures on this paper, they would put themselves on record as avowed rebels against the British crown—a hanging offense. At this juncture John Hancock stood up, seized the pen, and wrote his name on the parchment as large and black as he could. By this act he advertised to the world that he stood ready to make any sacrifice—even life itself—in support of his principles and ideals. His signature afforded a permanent record of his good faith.

Advertisers who go to great expense to place before the public printed announcements of their products are offering similar evidences of good faith, equal guarantees of fair dealing. Advertised goods are reputable, dependable, vouched for by manufacturers and dealers who are known and respected. By reading the advertising in this paper you will acquaint yourself with the safest and most economical sources of supply, the products which will serve you best and longest. Advertisements are the surest index to efficient buying. Do not neglect them.

John Hancock's signature

You have heard of him, of course. Everyone has. His signature is the first affixed, the most boldly executed, on the Declaration of Independence.

When that great document was drawn up and ready to sign, there was a pause. It was a moment of grave importance to all present. By placing their signatures on this paper, they would put themselves on record as avowed rebels against the British crown—a hanging offense. At this juncture John Hancock stood up, seized the pen, and wrote his name on the parchment as large and black as he could. By this act he advertised to the world that he stood ready to make any sacrifice—even life itself—in support of his principles and ideals. His signature afforded a permanent record of his good faith.

Advertisers who go to great expense to place before the public printed announcements of their products are offering similar evidences of good faith, equal guarantees of fair dealing. Advertised goods are reputable, dependable, vouched for by manufacturers and dealers who are known and respected. By reading the advertising in this paper you will acquaint yourself with the safest and most economical sources of supply, the products which will serve you best and longest. OUTLAWRY OF WAR

RATIFICATION of the treaty outlawing war in the United States Senate on Tuesday is certain to be followed by the rapid acceptances of practically all the nations of the world. This treaty makes war an offense against international law. Hitherto the status of war under the law of nations has been an anomaly. Although use of force is condemned by the conscience of all modern civilized people, war has been recognized legally as a legitimate instrument to gain national objects unattainable by peace. To make war a crime of course does not abolish it. There is no force which can deter a government from breaking this treaty or any other agreement if it is desperate enough or reckless enough to put world opinion at defiance. But this treaty is a step that makes for peace; it is the expression of a judgment against war which gains force for having been spoken.

The outlawry of war treaty is a tribute to Secretary Kellogg and an achievement which insures him a high place in the history of American foreign relations. The idea for this declaration sprang from his profound conviction that nations can have no objects in the modern world which justify brutal aggression against their neighbors. He not only initiated the movement but by his zeal and energy was responsible for the success of the negotiations leading to the drafting of the treaty in the form it was presented to the Senate.

A determined effort was made both in and out of the Senate to burden the agreement with nullifying terms. That a firm and clear renunciation of war is now possible is entirely due to Secretary Kellogg, firmly supported by President Coolidge. At a time when the cause of peace is faring none too well throughout the world, the treaty is all the greater victory.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

AN INDEX OF PROSPERITY

THERE will be head-shaking and misgivings over the report of National Industrial Conference Board statisticians that during 1928 the federal, state and municipal collection of taxes throughout the United States approximated $9,169,000,000, a clear $95,000,000 increase over the corresponding tax total for 1927. The increase is on the part of the state and local tax-spenders. Nobody who pays taxes wants to pay any more taxes than he can help. But, when we reduce the whole national tax bill to its relation to the individual, there doesn't seem any need of anxiety for what we get. In 1927 the bill ran about $76.50 per capita. For 1928 it may top $77 a few cents. But the whole $9,169,000,000 is less than ten per cent of the national income. In other words, all our federal, and state and municipal housekeeping put together, with all their vast undertakings, cost us less than ten cents of every dollar we make. Where in history did any nation ever get so much for its money?

The outlay includes more than $1,000,000,000 for highways alone. It includes $2,000,000,000 spent for public purposes, without including debt service on loans for buildings. School property is worth around $5,000,000,000. It includes veteran relief, pensions, workmen's compensation, hospitals, asylums, prisons, and state colleges. It covers water supply and sewerage, and health, police and fire service. It means pavements and sidewalks, and street cleaning, boulevards, and parks and recreation centers, ball grounds, swimming pools, and a thousand things that modern America accepts as routine, without ever thinking that somebody must pay for them.—St. Cloud Times.

READING FOR CHILDREN

EDUCATIONAL administrators and teachers will study with close attention the observations made by the consultative committee of the board of education on the problem of books in English elementary schools. So vast is the quantity of reading matter which is available in these days that it is more than ever important to devote attention to its quality. For that reason it is to be hoped that the literary tastes of the children in the schools today will not be left unformed by reason of financial restriction.

More books, and especially more good books, is the chief plea of the committee. At the same time the matter is not one of money only. Lovers of English literature must regret the tendency observed by the committee to neglect the Bible and the great monuments of the English tongue. When such phrases as "a mess of pottage," "Job's comforters" and "a barren fig tree" lose their significance, then it is true to say that the power to understand the great classics of the language is weakened, and a progressive impoverishment of imagination and feeling must ensue. If it be really the case that such old favorites of the English tradition as Byron's "The Eve of Waterloo," Cowper's "John Gilpin," Campbell's "Hohenlinden" and Gray's "Elegy" have been neglected of late, then there is undoubtedly a danger lest the familiar tradition of English poetry should be forgotten.

Literature has an incalculable influence in directing the pleasures of the people, in refining their tastes, in strengthening their character, and, indeed, in forming the national genius.—Christian Science Monitor.

OH, TO BE IN ALASKA!

GOVERNOR G. A. PARKS of Alaska, passing through Chicago, complained of the bitter cold. He is not used to such frigidities at his home in Juneau. There the winter temperature averages 50 deg. above zero. It is only in Central Alaska, away from the beneficent influence of the Japanese current, that Alaska is the icebound land we have heard about, it appears. Governor Parks spoke about the widespread use of the airplane in his great territory. Everybody uses planes up there. "Remember the excitement a few years ago when we sent serum to Nome by dog sled," he asks. "It took thirty days. This year we had a similar condition and I sent serum by plane to the lower Yukon, about the same distance, and it took only six hours." The governor says Alaska went "dry" about two years before national prohibition and that there is no trouble up there with bootleggers. He says radio reception is fine, that there is no farm problem and that daily air mail service and the national railroad have made communication a really modern thing.

So this is Alaska, the frozen and unprogressive! This is Seward's folly! How much is the fare to Juneau anyway?—Milwaukee Journal.

Clara Bow and Neil Hamilton in Elinor Glyn's "Three Week Ends." A Paramount Picture.

"Time has nothing to do with love." Words of Elinor Glyn, novelist de luxe, who sometimes writes stories for the screen.

That is what she has done with "Three Week Ends." Clara Bow's latest starring vehicle for Paramount, which opens at the Lyceum theatre tonight.

But, in this case, Madame Glyn disproves her own theory by showing just how much three week ends has to do with the love affairs of Miss Bow, as a girl of the tenements, and Neil Hamilton, her leading man, as a high-rolling insurance salesman.

This is said to be one of Clara Bow's best comedies.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR:

MUCH against her will Irene Robeline is sitting up at the wake of Lilith Holden, pretty wife of the minister, Guinn Holden. Irene had feared the sharp tongue and witch's instinct for guessing facts that other people wished concealed that was part of Mattie Anson, the town gossip. In the heavy flower-laden atmosphere Irene guards her own secret as Will Lundy, the new doctor, listens to Art Rakestraw and Mattie discuss the beauty and coquetry that had been Lilith's. After every young fellow in town had proposed to her at least once, it was the minister she married, though "she didn't care for the poor sucker she'd hooked, but only the fish swimming in the sea." Whether or not the fellows already had girls mattered not at all to Lilith. "Just give me a little time," she had said when taunted "to land" the new minister from Abby Whitaker.

Now Go On With the Story.

CHAPTER IV.
"A BBY fell in love, said Art, as if that explained everything. "Love does curious things to men and women, too. A fellow can be moseying along, single and contented. Then he gets hit by a feeling that makes him think he'll be playing croquet with the angels, with stars for balls. But nature don't tote fair! First thing he knows he's married. Down at the bottom of a well with the rope cut."

"The preacher, he looked curious at Lilith, like he thought she was pretty as red shoes, but he acted kinder edgy. Somebody must 'a' been telling him about Lilith and warning him what to expect," said Mattie.

Art moved heavily in his chair. "I done it. I told him to look out for a girl that would bewitch him in five minutes. I told him she was bright as a rainbow, but she'd burn his fingers. I said she was as graceful as a humming bird and as gay as a mocker. I told him what she'd done to every man in town."

"Including yourself?" jeered Mattie. "Including myself," he admitted morosely. "I told him the whole town would be looking on to see how swift he'd make a fool of himself. I put him on 'er special tricks."

"What did he say?" Lundy cased his long frame down into a rocking-chair for a change. "Said he was much obliged to me for my friendly warning. He'd try to give us as good account of himself as he could. But he reckoned there wasn't much danger, for she wouldn't look twice at a poor sober theologian."

Art passed a hand over his forehead. "Lord, lord! Maybe things would have turned out different if I hadn't put my tongue in it. Maybe he'd have just knuckled down right off, same as the rest, and then she'd 'a' been satisfied and left him. It would 'a' been worlds better for both 'em."

"You old blab mouth!" scolded Mattie. "I know it," he admitted meekly, looking like a disheartened tapir.

Mattie spoke up. "The crowd collected round 'em to see the fireworks. There was generally fun for the beholders and listeners when Lilith had a new man in view. But she cocked her gold head on one side and seemed like she decided he was more to handle than the young fellows she'd been roping in before. So she just twinkled her eyes at him and said soft, 'You're going to like me a little bit, aren't you, Mr. Minister?'"

The words seemed to echo curiously in the quiet room as Mattie paused.

"I reckon he said yes," commented Lundy.

"He smiled and flashed his white teeth and said, cheerful as could be, like a man that don't know he's been shot, 'That's my pastoral duty.'"

"And do you only do your duty?" she wanted to know. She pouted her red mouth half like she was cross and half like she was thinking of a kiss. He stood there, with his arms folded and his eyes dancing mischief, and said with an impudent grin like a small boy defying you to fool him, "Oh, a preacher's got to think of duty. His eyes must be on the stars."

"Some of the girls looked glad to see Lilith get her comeuppance, and that made her Irish rise. Her eyes got brighter and her cheeks were pink as a La France rose. She said soft to him, 'Don't you think a minister can give advice to young men better if he has had the same struggles they have?'"

"He laughed back and said, 'Should I take the measles because the kids in town have had them?'"

"Eh, la," sighed Art, and flapped his handkerchief at a mosquito that whined about his face.

"And so it went on like that every time they met. She would alight-step up to him and try to tease him into saying something harsh. And the town was looking on and enjoying it like a circus. Kids would follow the preacher down the street and ask him if he'd proposed to Lilith yet. He'd laugh back like a kid himself and say not as anybody'd heard him. He swung along as independent as you please, till it began to get on Lilith's nerves. She wasn't used to failure. The other girl's liveness up considerable and twitted her and asked if she hadn't lost her rabbit foot."

"The fellows made bets as to whether she'd land him or not," said Art. "Odds were all against the preacher. And more young men came to church than ever before. Maybe they thought he'd pop the question from the pulpit or let it out by mistake in a prayer. Or maybe they just came because Lilith was there every time the church door opened—to see the preacher afterward."

"Yes, she'd waylay him in the aisle, right smack before the deacons or the Ladies' Aid. She'd make her eyes look reproachful at him, and ask some question about her soul, while her dimples made fun of him. Little Lilith cared about her soul. It began to get on his nerves, too."

"Yes, I used to watch him when she came into church late. She always came late on purpose. He'd tighten his lips and turn kind of red, and a frown would show on his forehead," said Art. "It was fun for the town sinners, but it stopped being fun for the preacher."

"Or for Lilith," put in Mattie. "But she couldn't stop. Her reputation was up. And she had her pride."

"He had his pride, too," affirmed Art. "Yes, I told him one day if I was him I'd be a man or a mouse, one," said Mattie. "It begun to look like he was maybe in love with her. But he must 'a' known she'd make no sort of wife for him, a preacher, even if she'd have him, which no sane man would 'a' believed, knowing Lilith."

"A man wasn't sane when he was in love with Lilith," said Art.

"Yes, it wasn't till after she'd jilted him that a man waked up to see how vain and selfish she was. All she cared for was to admire herself in a mirror or in men's eyes."

"She had aplenty of that kind of mirrors." A thin, high wail cut into their talk.

"And now she's been married and had a baby and is dead," mourned Art. "Anybody could have married and had a baby—but there was only one Lilith." He wagged his head.

Lundy tossed his cigarette away and leaned forward to listen. "How did they become engaged?"

"They never were engaged," Mattie told him.

"How did he propose, then?" "He didn't." She stifled a yawn and then giggled. "The Wilton twins heard what happened. They saw Lilith going to the church study one day, so they sneaked in and hid behind the door to hear what they could hear."

Irene stirred as if from tension she was trying hard to control. But the others were engrossed in the story and did not see.

Miss Mattie went on with her recital. "She came up to him in the church study, where he was working on his sermon. He said, 'polite and cool, 'Is there anything I can do for you, Miss Lilith?'" She asked him, "Why are you so cruel to me?"

"Cruel?" he asked her. "Yes, you know I love you." He folded his arms and shook his head. "No." The Wilton twins peeked to see what would happen. She came closer, they said, and held out her hands like a baby begging you to take it and said, "I do love you! And you love me, too."

"He didn't say a word, but just looked at her with his forehead puckered in a frown and his brown eyes kinder blazing. She cries out, 'You do love me! Your eyes say so, but your lips won't speak.' He didn't take his eyes off her face, but he said, 'It's my lips you must believe.' She gave a little cry as if she couldn't stand it. "Think what this means to my pride," she said. But that didn't budge him, for he only told her, "Who began it?"

"He kept standing there waiting for her to go, and she said, 'Isn't there anything I can do to show you I mean it?' The Wilton boys said he caught her two wrists and held 'em tight as a steel trap, and her wriggling to get loose. "Do you mean it enough to marry me this morning?" he jerked out.

"She 'ied to break loose, and said, 'Oh, no.' Then he let go her wrists, bowed low, sort of scornful, and said, 'I know it. I have my pride, too. And I don't propose to be made a fool of before my congregation.' He wasn't smiling then, the twins said."

"Maybe she thought he was just trying her, and would back out himself if she said yes, or else that she could string him along after she once got him going her way. Anyway, she said right quick, 'All right then, I'll do it.'"

Lundy sat erect his eyes bright with interest.

Mattie went on: "He snatched her to him and kissed her hard, the twins said. Then he grabbed his hat, took her by the arm and led her out without saying another word. And Lilith didn't say anything either. He waltzed her over to the county clerk's office, got the license, and they was married before Lilith had time to catch her breath. And that's how it happened."

"So!" said Lundy, nodding his head meditatively, as if to recreate the scene for himself.

Opium in China

Opium is said to have been introduced into China by the Arabs, perhaps in the Thirteenth century. It was originally used as a medicine. Opium smoking was introduced in the Seventeenth century. It was first prohibited by the edict of the Emperor Yung-Cheng in 1723.

Compressed air was first used in tunnel work by Hersent at Antwerp in 1879 in a small drift with a cast-iron lining. In the same year compressed air was used for the first time in any important tunnel by D. C. Haslin in the famous first Hudson River tunnel, New York city.

Art passed a hand over his forehead. "Lord, lord! Maybe things would have turned out different if I hadn't put my tongue in it. Maybe he'd have just knuckled down right off, same as the rest, and then she'd 'a' been satisfied and left him. It would 'a' been worlds better for both 'em."

"You old blab mouth!" scolded Mattie.

"I know it," he admitted meekly, looking like a disheartened tapir.

Mattie spoke up. "The crowd collected round 'em to see the fireworks. There was generally fun for the beholders and listeners when Lilith had a new man in view. But she cocked her gold head on one side and seemed like she decided he was more to handle than the young fellows she'd been roping in before. So she just twinkled her eyes at him and said soft, 'You're going to like me a little bit, aren't you, Mr. Minister?'"

The words seemed to echo curiously in the quiet room as Mattie paused.

"I reckon he said yes," commented Lundy.

"He smiled and flashed his white teeth and said, cheerful as could be, like a man that don't know he's been shot, 'That's my pastoral duty.'"

"And do you only do your duty?" she wanted to know. She pouted her red mouth half like she was cross and half like she was thinking of a kiss. He stood there, with his arms folded and his eyes dancing mischief, and said with an impudent grin like a small boy defying you to fool him, "Oh, a fellow's got to think of duty. His eyes must be on the stars."

"Some of the girls looked glad to see Lilith get her conceit, and that made her Irish rise. Her eyes got brighter and her cheeks were pink as a La France rose. She said soft to him, 'Don't you think a minister can give advice to young men better if he has had the same struggles they have?'"

"He laughed back and said, 'Should I take the measles because the kids in town have had them?'"

"Eh, la," sighed Art, and flapped his handkerchief at a mosquito that whined about his face.

"And so it went on like that every time they met. She would alight-step up to him and try to tease him into saying something harsh. And the town was looking on and enjoying it like a circus. Kids would follow the preacher down the street and ask him if he'd proposed to Lilith yet. He'd laugh back like a kid himself and say not as anybody'd heard him. He swung along as independent as you please, till it began to get on Lilith's nerves. She wasn't used to failure. The other girl's livened up considerable and twitted her and asked if she hadn't lost her rabbit foot."

"The fellows made bets as to whether she'd land him or not," said Art. "Odds were all against the preacher. And more young men came to church than ever before. Maybe they thought he'd pop the question from the pulpit or let it out by mistake in a prayer. Or maybe they just came because Lilith was there every time the church door opened—to see the preacher afterward."

"Yes, she'd waylay him in the aisle, right smack before the deacons or the Ladies' Aid. She'd make her eyes look reproachful at him, and ask some question about her soul, while her dimples made fun of him. Little Lilith cared about her soul. It began to get on his nerves, too."

"Yes, I used to watch him when she came into church late. She always came late on purpose. He'd tighten his lips and turn kind of red, and a frown would show on his forehead," said Art. "It was fun for the town sinners, but it stopped being fun for the preacher."

"Or for Lilith," put in Mattie. "But she couldn't stop. Her reputation was up. And she had her pride."

"He had his pride, too," affirmed Art.

"Yes, I told him one day if I was him I'd be a man or a mouse, one," said Mattie. "It begun to look like he was maybe in love with her. But he must 'a' known she'd make no sort of wife for him, a preacher, even if she'd have him, which no sane man would 'a' believed, knowing Lilith."

"A man wasn't sane when he was in love with Lilith," said Art.

"Yes, it wasn't till after she'd jilted him that a man waked up to see how vain and selfish she was. All she cared for was to admire herself in a mirror or in men's eyes."

"She had aplenty of that kind of mirrors." A thin, high wail cut into their talk.

"And now she's been married and had a baby and is dead," mourned Art. "Anybody could have married and had a baby—but there was only one Lilith." He wagged his head.

Lundy tossed his cigarette away and leaned forward to listen. "How did they become engaged?"

"They never were engaged," Mattie told him.

"How did he propose, then?" "He didn't." She stifled a yawn and then giggled. "The Wilton twins heard what happened. They saw Lilith going to the church study one day, so they sneaked in and hid behind the door to hear what they could hear."

Irene stirred as if from tension she was trying hard to control. But the others were engrossed in the story and did not see.

Miss Mattie went on with her recital. "She came up to him in the church study, where he was working on his sermon. He said, polite and cool, 'Is there anything I can do for you, Miss Lilith?' She asked him, 'Why are you so cruel to me?'"

"Cruel?" he asked her. "Yes, you know I love you. He folded his arms and shook his head. 'No.' The Wilton twins peeked to see what would happen. She came closer, they said, and held out her hands like a baby begging you to take it and said, 'I do love you! And you love me, too.'"

"He didn't say a word, but just looked at her with his forehead puckered in a frown and his brown eyes kinder blazing. She cries out, 'You do love me! Your eyes say so, but your lips won't speak.' He didn't take his eyes off her face, but he said, 'It's my lips you must believe.' She gave a little cry as if she couldn't stand it. 'Think what this means to my pride,' she said. But that didn't budge him, for he only told her, 'Who began it?'"

"He kept standing there waiting for her to go, and she said, 'Isn't there anything I can do to show you I mean it?' The Wilton boys said he caught her two wrists and held 'em tight as a steel trap, and her wriggling to get loose. 'Do you mean it enough to marry me this morning?' he jerked out.

"She 'ried to break loose, and said, 'Oh, no.' Then he let go her wrists, bowed low, sort of scornful, and said, 'I know it. I have my pride, too. And I don't propose to be made a fool of before my congregation.' He wasn't smiling then, the twins said.

"Maybe she thought he was just trying her, and would back out himself if she said yes, or else that she could sting him along after she once got him going her way. Anyway, she said right quick, 'All right then, I'll do it.'"

Lundy sat erect his eyes bright with interest.

Mattie went on: "He snatched her to him and kissed her hard, the twins said. Then he grabbed his hat, took her by the arm and led her out without saying another word. And Lilith didn't say anything either. He waited her over to the county clerk's office, got the license, and they was married before Lilith had time to catch her breath. And that's how it happened."

"So!" said Lundy, nodding his head meditatively, as if to recreate the scene for himself.

Opium in China

Opium is said to have been introduced into China by the Arabs, perhaps in the Thirteenth century. It was originally used as a medicine. Opium smoking was introduced in the Seventeenth century. It was first prohibited by the edict of the Emperor Yung-Cheng in 1720.

Used for Tunneling

Compressed air was first used in tunnel work by Hersent at Antwerp in 1870 in a small drift with a cast-iron lining. In the same year compressed air was used for the first time in any important tunnel by D. C. Haslin in the famous first Hudson River tunnel, New York city.

Mourners Had to Pray

Lord Bray, fifth baron of his line, of "The Gables," who died in England a short time ago, gave definite thought in his will to who should attend his funeral—and how they should attend it. One clause in it reads, "If you can't pray for me, stay away from my funeral."

RADIO ORDINANCE TO BENEFIT HOMES

No Drastic Action Will be Taken in Enforcement; All Urged to Cooperate

CLEARER RECEPTION SOUGHT

Corrections Should be Made in Appliances
if Defects Are Known

Radio Ordinance No. 331 was passed at the last regular meeting of the city council.

This ordinance does not require any action by household electric appliance owners to improve electrical conditions in their homes until first requested so to do by sponsors of the ordinance or by order of the building inspector. If, however defects are known to exist in the appliances, corrections should be made.

The purpose of the ordinance is not to interfere with or eliminate the use of electrical appliances, but to eliminate unnecessary interference with radio reception. By correcting faulty appliances the owners of such appliances are eliminating dangers and securing more efficient service from their appliances. Most interference is of the type, such as faulty wiring, that the owner would desire to eliminate as soon as known to him.

It is hoped that it will not be necessary to resort to the enforcement of the ordinance but that all will cooperate to eliminate unnecessary interference and permit the many radio owners to secure real radio reception in this community.

Flu Milder Than in 1918.

But Vicks Sets New Record

Although the type of flu this year is not so serious as in 1918, health authorities are urging everybody to treat even the slightest cold at the start, as colds lower the resistance and make the body an easy prey to bronchitis or pneumonia.

An interesting response to this warning has been the phenomenal call for Vicks VapoRub, the external treatment which proved so helpful in the 1918 epidemic.

In spite of vastly increased capacity, the Vicks laboratories are once more operating all night long and are now producing 375,000 jars daily. A substantial part of this increase is attributed to the widespread use of Vicks as a preventative. —adv

CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION

9th Birthday of Passage of Amendment is to be Observed

TWO SPEAKERS HERE SUNDAY

Debate at First Methodist Church,
Monday a Mock Trial at Presbyterian Church

(Contributed by Local W. C. T. U.)

Today marks the ninth birthday of constitutional prohibition. The Women's Christian Temperance Union all over our country are celebrating this event. There are many people who will declare that the date marks nine years of failure. There are others—a large and an enthusiastic majority—who will insist and furnish indisputable proof of the truth of their statement, that on this anniversary we celebrate nine years of blessing and benefaction to countless men, women and children.

Not even the most ardent friends of the law assert that it has proven unqualifiedly successful in its operations, for the very evident reason that it has never really had a chance to show what it can accomplish.

Prohibition is advancing however. It has just recorded a notable victory. Give prohibition its chance. Law enforcement is a question of politics and citizenship. The honest efforts of officials charged with the responsibility of law enforcement should be supported by the pulpit, the press and the people. Law observance should be supported by all as well said Mrs. Ella Boole, now resident of the W. C. T. U. Law observance is a moral obligation; it is personal and individual. In the early days of our country when municipal lighting of streets was unheard of, each householder hung a lantern outside his door. At the call of fire all rushed to form a bucket brigade, women and boys helping.

The community was protected and safeguarded from home to home.

Let us now appeal to the citizens of our country to make a great bulwark of protection against the liquor traffic from home to home. To this end, willing obedience to the law is necessary. Give prohibition a chance personally and politically. The liquor traffic had its day.

Henry Ford says a repeal of the 18th amendment would be a real calamity. Personally he would turn out the army and navy to stop violations. Life would be impossible with liquor and the speed we are now keyed up to.

Savings bank deposits in the whole country showed an increase of two billion dollars this last year, a strong argument in favor of prohibition.

Prohibition was not imposed by fanatics who, wishing to drink, did not want others to be able to do so, but because the whole people became tired of the saloon and all its evils, and voted it out of existence.

To commemorate the anniversary

in Brainerd, there will be two representatives of the Anti-Saloon League here on Sunday, January 20. In the evening at 7:45 o'clock, they will give a debate in the Methodist church, and on Monday, January 21, a mock trial for murder in the Presbyterian church, also at 7:45 o'clock. These promise to be very interesting, and all who can attend are urged to do so.

CITIZENS STATE BANK OF BRAINERD

Oldest and Largest State Bank in Crow Wing Co.

HISTORY repeats itself again

ON January 7, 1926, a new automobile came into existence. It was a six. It had bodies by Fisher. It sold for $825. It introduced real luxury and beauty to buyers in the low-priced field. This new car was the Pontiac Six. During its first 10 months, it more than doubled the full first year's sales of any new make of car. That is still a world's record.

But Pontiac's builders did not rest content with their early triumph. They knew that American people are constantly on the lookout for new and finer things.

So in February, 1927, they introduced the New and Finer Pontiac Six. And it was lower in price than ever, selling for $775. Then, in July, greatly increased production enabled Pontiac's builders to reduce the price again. Now Pontiac sold for $745.

Came 1928, and with it a still finer Pontiac. Even then the price remained only $745. And after six months, during which this car became one of the best sellers in the industry, more improvements were announced. Last July, Pontiac was made faster, more powerful than ever and more attractive in style.

This brief history is significant. It recalls Pontiac's origin and the introduction of true motoring luxury into the low-priced field. It relates how Pontiac's progress has matched strides with the increasing demand for luxury among those hundreds of thousands who form its market.

But most important of all, it gives you an idea of something that is coming. Automobile history is repeating itself again. Soon Oakland will present a brand new Pontiac Six, an even greater advancement over other low-priced cars available today than the original Pontiac represented in 1926. Watch for the

CONSTITUTIONAL

PROHIBITION

9th Birthday of Passage of Amendment is to be Observed

TWO SPEAKERS HERE SUNDAY

Debate at First Methodist Church, Monday a Mock Trial at Presbyterian Church

(Contributed by Local W. C. T. U.)

Today marks the ninth birthday of constitutional prohibition. The Women's Christian Temperance Union all over our country are celebrating this event. There are many people who will declare that the date marks nine years of failure. There are others—a large and an enthusiastic majority—who will insist and furnish indisputable proof of the truth of their statement, that on this anniversary we celebrate nine years of blessing and benefaction to countless men, women and children.

Not even the most ardent friends of the law assert that it has proven unqualifiedly successful in its operations, for the very evident reason that it has never really had a chance to show what it can accomplish.

Prohibition is advancing however. It has just recorded a notable victory. Give prohibition its chance. Law enforcement is a question of politics and citizenship. The honest efforts of officials charged with the responsibility of law enforcement should be supported by the pulpit, the press and the people. Law observance should be supported by all as well said Mrs. Ella Boole, now resident of the W. C. T. U. Law observance is a moral obligation; it is personal and individual. In the early days of our country when municipal lighting of streets was unheard of, each householder hung a lantern outside his door. At the call of fire all rushed to form a bucket brigade, women and boys helping.

The community was protected and safeguarded from home to home.

Let us now appeal to the citizens of our country to make a great bulwark of protection against the liquor traffic from home to home. To this end, willing obedience to the law is necessary. Give prohibition a chance personally and politically. The liquor traffic had its day.

Henry Ford says a repeal of the 18th amendment would be a real calamity. Personally he would turn out the army and navy to stop violations. Life would be impossible with liquor and the speed we are now keyed up to.

Savings bank deposits in the whole country showed an increase of two billion dollars this last year, a strong argument in favor of prohibition.

Prohibition was not imposed by fanatics who, wishing to drink, did not want others to be able to do so, but because the whole people became tired of the saloon and all its evils, and voted it out of existence.

To commemorate the anniversary

in Brainerd, there will be two representatives of the Anti-Saloon League here on Sunday, January 20. In the evening at 7:45 o'clock, they will give a debate in the Methodist church, and on Monday, January 21, a mock trial for murder in the Presbyterian church, also at 7:45 o'clock. These promise to be very interesting, and all who can attend are urged to do so.

HISTORY

repeats itself again

ON January 7, 1926, a new automobile came into existence. It was a six. It had bodies by Fisher. It sold for $825. It introduced real luxury and beauty to buyers in the low-priced field. This new car was the Pontiac Six. During its first 10 months, it more than doubled the full first year's sales of any new make of car. That is still a world's record.

But Pontiac's builders did not rest content with their early triumph. They knew that American people are constantly on the lookout for new and finer things.

So in February, 1927, they introduced the New and Finer Pontiac Six. And it was lower in price than ever, selling for $775. Then, in July, greatly increased production enabled Pontiac's builders to reduce the price again. Now Pontiac sold for $745.

Came 1928, and with it a still finer Pontiac. Even then the price

remained only $745. And after six months, during which this car became one of the best sellers in the industry, more improvements were announced. Last July, Pontiac was made faster, more powerful than ever and more attractive in style.

This brief history is significant. It recalls Pontiac's origin and the introduction of true motoring luxury into the low-priced field. It relates how Pontiac's progress has matched strides with the increasing demand for luxury among those hundreds of thousands who form its market.

But most important of all, it gives you an idea of something that is coming. Automobile history is repeating itself again. Soon Oakland will present a brand new Pontiac Six, an even greater advancement over other low-priced cars available today than the original Pontiac represented in 1926. Watch for the

JACK DEMPSEY TO BE IN RING AGAIN

CAREY DIRECTING THE AFFAIRS OF MADISON GARDEN

HIS PERSONAL BELIEF THAT FORMER CHAMPION WILL STAGE COMEBACK

THINKS HE IS CAPABLE OF ANOTHER FIGHT FROM PHYSICAL STANDPOINT

New York, Jan. 16. — (U.P.)—Jack Dempsey will fight again, according to William F. Carey, vice-president and treasurer of Madison Square Garden corporation who with Col. John S. Hammond is now directing the affairs of the Garden.

Before he departed for Miami Beach, Fla., last night to assist Dempsey in directing the Jack Sharkey-Young Strubling bout February 27, Carey said it was his personal belief Dempsey would attempt another comeback.

"I have formed this impression from talking to Dempsey," Carey said, "however, he has not told me one way or the other what his plans are about fighting again. I know that he feels himself capable of another fight from the physical standpoint."

Carey and Dempsey went to Boston together last week to sign Sharkey, and had ample opportunity to talk over many things other than the coming Sharkey-Strubling bout.

"It is significant that Dempsey has issued no statement announcing his retirement," Carey said.

SEEKS TO LEGALIZE DECISION BOXING IN WISCONSIN

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 16. — (U.P.)—State Senator Irving Michigan, Milwaukee, has announced he will introduce a bill in the state legislature which would legalize decision boxing matches in this state.

Two years ago the state boxing commission fought such a measure but that body now is reported to back the bill.

The new bill will provide that decisions be given only by "duly licensed" referees and will not provide for judges to share in handing down the verdicts, it was said.

CLARENCE LIEN IN SWEEPSTAKES HONORS IN JUNIOR CORN SHOW

St. Paul, Jan. 16. — (U.P.)—Clarence Lien, St. Cloud, has been announced as winner of sweepstakes honors in the junior corn show held here in connection with the farmers' and homemakers' short course at the University of Minnesota farm school.

The ten ears of corn exhibited by Clarence were judged the best of entries from practically every county in Minnesota. A. J. Kittleson, assistant director of Minnesota 4-H clubs, was in charge of the corn judging.

The St. Cloud youth, who is a 4-H club member, was awarded a cash prize and a blue ribbon for his exhibit of Yellow Dent. He carried the sweepstakes honors over Vernon Pronfor, southern state champion, who entered 10 ears of White Dent.

STILLWATER PLANS BARGE TERMINAL

Stillwater, Minn., Jan. 16. — (U.P.)—The proposal to build a $50,000 Mississippi river barge terminal at Stillwater may soon be decided in a special city election it was indicated here today.

The proposal to call a special election was made at a meeting here Tuesday night of the city council, after A. W. Kleinschmidt, traffic manager at the state prison told of savings in river transportation last year.

The traffic manager said $26,044 had been saved in 1928 by water transportation of Sisal to the Penal institution. He said that additional thousands of dollars would be saved by the construction of a terminal here which would avoid the necessity of rail transfers at the Twin Cities.

HAGBERG SETS NEW PIN RECORD

'CHERRY CIRCLE' GOES INTO THE TRACK DISCARD

Chicago, Jan. 16. — (U.P.)—Worn for thirty years by many leading athletes of the country, the famed "cherry circle" emblem of the Chicago Athletic association went into the track and field discard today.

The emblem was taken out of elder track competition when its backers announced the disbanding of a team, which countless times has seen its members step into Olympic, national and sectional championships.

The announcement of the disbanding, reference was made to "lack of interest among members" as the chief motive for taking the team out of competition.

The present plans of the association call for a continuance in swimming and ice hockey competition.
